Global Economy

In the US, the pace of economic activity cooled in July, with the Federal Reserve projecting a 2.8% growth rate for the third quarter, down from 3.1% in the second quarter. In Europe, the European Central Bank (ECB) announced plans to expand its bond-purchase program by €330 billion, indicating a broadening of its stimulus efforts. In Japan, the Bank of Japan (BoJ) kept its monetary policy unchanged, with the yield on 10-year government bonds remaining at 0.1%.

Oil Markets

Crude oil prices edged up last week after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) decided to withhold oil production, suggesting a tighter supply outlook. However, prices are likely to climb further on hopes that US sanctions on Iran will further reduce global supply.

Commodities Market

Crude oil prices edged up last week after the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) decided to withhold oil production, suggesting a tighter supply outlook. However, prices are likely to climb further on hopes that US sanctions on Iran will further reduce global supply.